LUXURY REAL ESTATE

Published February 15, 2023

INSIDE: Top photos reveal the latest in tech and interiors / Common spaces and concierge elevate the condo lifestyle

Luxury buyers should be 'alert for property opportunities now'

Latest real estate market data and report insight show low competition and more favourable conditions

Concierge services, high-end finishes, and smart home technology are all hallmarks of the luxury real estate market. As the market continues to recover, buyers are looking for properties that offer a high level of service and a premium lifestyle. The luxury real estate market is currently in a strong position, with low inventory and high demand. This creates a favorable environment for buyers looking for high-quality properties. The market is expected to continue to grow, with more high-end properties being developed and sold. Buyers should be alert for property opportunities now, as the market is likely to remain strong for some time.

MADE IN CANADA
STICK HANDLING

■ Greater Boston thought he was a genius. In 2010, when he heard Heritage Hockey Sticks, Canada's first stick factory, was about to shut down, he stepped in. The former Boston chair and Hockey News co-owner had experience and connections could dig up millions in equity loans into profitable business. "I was believed in the first meeting hockey sticks in Canada should work," he says.

But big retailers weren't buying his "Burr Canadian" pitch. What's more, the product seemed dated. Boston's Brimfield, Ore., factory churned out wooden sticks, not the $300 carbon fibre blends every sporting McDonald wanted. And then COVID-19 shut down most worldwide. "We took a hard hit the first couple years," Brimfield says. "We sold what our sticks."

Still, Brimfield is a guy. He knew the industry had largely abandoned middle-class families and been long gone. Wood sticks, while still sold, will make up 10% of the market, mostly because they cost under $50. "It's a niche market, but it is going crazy," says Brimfield, who recently bought U.S. equipment maker True Hockey. "And there's a lot of competition in Canada or the U.S."

And then a little luck came his way. And Donald Trump's talk of Canada becoming the 51st state, as they Canadian were back had. Suddenly, the same retailers who'd passed were calling. The year he expected to sell $100,000 sticks, a quarter of those carrying Canadian True's Sherwood brand, proving that even a genius play needs a lucky break. —Patricia White

How a national menopause strategy could improve health equity – and Canada's economy

Research shows that menopause is a time of significant change for many women, affecting their health, productivity, and overall quality of life. A national strategy to support women during this transition could have a profound impact on Canada's economy and social equity.

Menopause is a natural part of aging, but it can be a challenging time for many women. It often involves a range of symptoms, including hot flashes, mood swings, and changes in sleep patterns. These symptoms can significantly impact a woman's ability to work and perform daily tasks.

A national strategy to support women during menopause could include a variety of measures, such as providing access to hormone therapy, offering workplace accommodations, and providing education and support resources. Such a strategy could help women maintain their productivity and overall health, which would benefit the Canadian economy as a whole.

Research also shows that menopause is a time of increased risk for chronic diseases, such as heart disease and osteoporosis. A national strategy to support women during menopause could also include measures to reduce these risks, such as providing access to regular health check-ups and promoting healthy lifestyle choices.

Overall, a national strategy to support women during menopause could have a significant positive impact on Canada's economy and social equity. By providing women with the resources and support they need to navigate this transition, we can help them maintain their productivity and overall health, which will benefit the country as a whole.

Economic impact of the menopause on the Canadian workforce

Lost productivity, absenteeism and other factors could cost the Canadian economy $3.5 billion annually.

35 per cent of women experience menopause symptoms that impact their work.

Globe Advisor

The premier news and information destination for Canada's financial advisors

CONTACT US →

“The wealth management industry is undergoing transformative change.”

The average age of advisors continues to rise, resulting in a need for new and fresh approaches to succession planning. The Great Wealth Transfer has given rise to the challenge of attracting and retaining the next generation of clients. The rise of AI is redefining how financial advice is delivered. And the 60-40 portfolio is the relic of a bygone era. All that is in addition to what advisors must manage on a daily basis – produce winning and customized portfolios for clients and provide holistic services focused on tax, insurance and wills and estate planning. They must do all that while navigating the intricacies of building and running successful businesses. Globe Advisor aims to make sense of these trends and provide financial advisors with the news, information and analysis they need to succeed in this ever-changing world.

PABLO FUCHS, EDITOR

Globe Advisor

Globe Advisor is The Globe and Mail's direct-to-advisor hub that provides the in-depth, essential news, information, analysis and insights financial advisors need to attract, acquire and develop effective relationships with clients as well as build and run successful practices.

The Globe Advisor editorial team – consisting of Pablo Fuchs, editor, Mark Burgess, assistant editor, Deanne Gage, reporter and Rudy Mezzetta, reporter – have a long history of covering the wealth management industry at various trade publications prior to joining The Globe and Mail.

Editorial Insight: What Advisors Want

- In light of breaking news delivered through The Globe and Mail and Report on Business, Globe Advisor's goal is to provide additional in-depth news analysis that delivers insights and perspectives.
- Articles on sophisticated investing and financial planning strategies – especially stock and ETF picks from investment experts as well as tax-related matters – are of particular interest to readers.
- Globe Advisor readers love to share Globe and Mail content with their clients. Specifically, they cited articles focused on retirement, behavioural finance, portfolio construction and tax planning.

Behind the Advice Podcast Sponsorship

Behind the Advice is Globe Advisor's original podcast hosted by Brenda Bouw, featuring candid conversations with financial advisors from across Canada. An extension of Globe Advisor's editorial series, each episode explores the personal experiences and lessons that shape how advisors approach money and client advice.

Sponsorship Includes:

- Exclusive six-episode season sponsorship with pre- and mid-roll audio
- 100% share of voice on podcast landing pages
- Optional ad scripting and recording support from Globe Content Studio
- Editorially independent series with 100% SOV around all articles

Wealth Leadership Forum Event

The Globe Advisor Wealth Leadership Event is a full-day, in-person experience for Canada's financial advisor community, hosted on June 8th, 2026 at The Globe and Mail Centre in Toronto. Featuring a marquee keynote speaker alongside industry experts and Globe journalists, the CE-accredited program focuses on navigating market change, strengthening client relationships, and evolving modern wealth management practices.

Sponsorship Includes:

- Thought leadership and speaker integration at Presenting and Gold levels
- Two full-page print ads in The Globe and Mail to drive advisor attendance
- Targeted email outreach to Globe Advisor audiences
- Promotional digital advertising on globeandmail.com (75,000+ impressions)
- Event video embedded in an advisor-only Globe Advisor article with post-event ICYMI email

Convening audiences, connecting communities

Globe and Mail – Convening Solutions

For sponsorship opportunities, please contact
Amy Nelson, Head of Event Sponsorship, The Globe and Mail
anelson@globeandmail.com

Leverage the convening power of The Globe and Mail with Globe-branded events. While many events take place at the stunning Globe and Mail Events Centre, we can host across Canada, the U.S., or internationally, tailored to your target audience. Typical audiences include senior business decision-makers, government and policy influencers, financial advisors, and highly affluent, educated consumers.

Multi-Sponsored Globe Events

Annual Globe and Mail Events often build on editorial coverage, reports, rankings, or celebratory milestones. For events like Intersect, The Globe's signature event opportunity, sponsorships are fully turnkey, covering all event programming, logistics, and marketing for audience acquisition. Options include Brand Partnership, Winner's Spotlight, Gold, Platinum, Presenting, or Diamond sponsorships.

Bespoke Events

Work with us to create a single-sponsor event focused on thought leadership that aligns with your brand and carries editorial credibility. Timing, format, and audience are flexible. Sponsorships are fully turnkey, and your thought leadership is woven organically into the conversation.

Events can be:

- English, French, or bilingual
- Hosted virtually, in-person only or hybrid sessions
- VIP events, half-day, breakfasts, dinners, or roundtable formats

Powered by Globe and Mail Event Logistics

Simplify your own events with Globe Event logistics support. Our team handles venue sourcing, AV, catering, registration, marketing asset creation, and registration management. These events do not include Globe and Mail audience marketing, programming, or speaker/moderator sourcing.

Benefits of Sponsorship

- Lead generation
- High profile thought leadership
- Leverage the trusted brand halo of The Globe and Mail
- Create an opportunity for two-way dialogue with your target audience of decision makers
- Extend into thematic editorial and digital sponsored content
